

Buying or selling a home is one of the biggest things most people ever do. With that in mind, it is important that you obtain the best possible advice.

Here are some questions you may wish to ask when choosing or retaining your solicitor.

Do I come to your office, or is the material sent to me by mail?

Who do I see at your office? Is the person I see a solicitor or a clerk?

Does your firm specialise in property and related transactions?

What skill level and expertise does the person that I will be seeing have?

What are your costs, and how do they compare with other solicitors or firms?

If you were to ring Trinity Law, the answers that you would get would be as follows:-

Unless you are interstate or overseas, we will have a "face to face" meeting to discuss the purchase or sale. Generally it takes at least an hour to fully discuss all of the issues relating to the purchase or sale of a property and the most efficient and accurate way of doing that is by meeting with us personally.

You will either see a Partner or a Solicitor at Trinity Law in a conveyancing transaction. Our very skilled Legal Clerks will facilitate settlement arrangements, but the initial interview and the overall carriage of the matter is the responsibility of a solicitor. At Trinity Law, Legal Clerks do not undertake interviews.

Trinity Law is a firm specifically focused on property, commercial and construction legal work. Trinity Law invests heavily in ensuring that all its staff, Partners, Solicitors and Legal Clerks, are at the cutting edge of developments in these areas of law. It does not do family, personal injury or criminal law. Property Law is not incidental to our practice; it is an integral and essential part of our business.

Michael James and John Irvine are well known and well respected property lawyers. Michael and John are both members of the ACT Law Society's Property Law Committee - indeed Michael is the Chair of the Committee. Michael is also Deputy Chair of the Australian Property Law Group, part of the Law Council of Australia. They are also members of other property related professional committees at a senior level.

Although you will find that our professional fees are very competitive, Trinity Law is not seeking to be the cheapest provider of legal services in town. However, it does seek to differentiate by providing the best possible value. If you want the biggest contract of your life to go right, call Trinity Law today on 6163 5050!
